When Nia arrives at the reunion, she is surprised to see that her friends have not changed much. There's Kenya (Tami Roman), the loud and boisterous one; Darryl (Keith David), the handsome and charming one; and Coop (Chris Spencer), the funny and carefree one.

The friends quickly fall back into their old routines, and they spend the night drinking, dancing, and reminiscing about the past. However, as the night goes on, Nia begins to realize that her friends are not as happy as they seem. Kenya is struggling to find a job and is about to lose her house. Darryl is going through a divorce and is struggling to be a single father. And Coop is addicted to drugs and alcohol.

Nia is shocked to see how her friends have changed, and she begins to question her own life. She realizes that she has been so focused on her career and family that she has neglected her own friendships.

Nia decides that she needs to do something to help her friends, so she proposes that they take a trip together to a beach house. The friends agree, and they spend the next few days relaxing, talking, and laughing. The trip helps the friends to bond again, and they realize that they are still there for each other, no matter what.
